

Looking Back At The Biggest Home Remodeling Trends Of 2023

By Ana Durrani
Contributor

Reviewed By Kristin Salaky Editor

As 2023 comes to a close, we're looking back on some of the best home renovation trends of the year. From the kitchen to the outdoor space, there was a common thread when it came to the home improvement trends in 2023: Homeowners were looking for ways to make their entire house more sustainable and create spaces that were reflective of their personal style and needs. Here are the six biggest home remodeling trends of 2023.

1. Sustainable Design Choices

PJCArchitecture /Photo by Bjorg Magnea

One home renovation trend from 2023 actually has the future in mind: Homeowners were opting for more sustainable design choices in every room in their homes.

Homeowners swapped out older appliances for more energy-efficient options, chose eco-friendly materials and found ways to restore and reuse furniture and original features in their homes, just to name a few. These renovation solutions prove that you can keep sustainability at the forefront of your remodeling while still incorporating your own personal design and style into each space.

2. Natural Materials in the Kitchen and Bathroom

RJCArchitecture / Photo by Bjorg Magnea

If being in nature brings you a sense of calm and relaxation, then you may be inspired by this next design trend. Using natural elements in renovation—especially in the kitchen and bathroom—was a design choice that many homeowners found to be a perfect fit.

From natural stone backsplashes, tile and countertops to rustic wood cabinets, furniture and decor, incorporating natural elements helps spaces feel grounded and can breathe new life into these rooms. These organic materials are timeless, like granite or marble countertops, that not only add sophistication but also endure the test of time. These natural elements create ambiance in any space and can blend beautifully with any design style.